

Raising the profile of the counselling profession | Annual Conference | Awards

MEDIA KIT 2023 National
Counsellors' Day

22nd June

Why a National Counsellors' Day?

The UKs first ever National Counsellors' Day was held at the University of Lincoln on the 22nd June 2019. We celebrate National Counsellors' Day on the 22nd of June each year, and our yearly conference falls on the closest Saturday.

A National Counsellors' Day raises the profile of the counselling profession. It helps us to raise awareness of what it is that counsellors actually do, and will hopefully help us to raise awareness of the ongoing struggles we have surrounding employment and hardship. But crucially, it gives us space to bring together counsellors from across the UK to discuss important issues around social and political issues and make plans to address these. It also encourages us to spend time together and celebrate the often life saving work that we do a space to lift each other up and support each other as we do so.

How can you get involved?

We'd love you to celebrate the day with us. You can:

- encourage your students, staff, partners and shareholders to get involved (feel free to send them this pack)
- share our social media posts (links on the final page)
- download the website and social media images from the following pages and use for your own organisation.
- attend and help us promote our yearly conference.
- nominate someone for an award!
- you have permission to use all material from this pack and our website.

National Counsellors' Day 2023 Online Conference
